Dear Aryan

Thank you for your email.

The University of Cambridge's courses are highly academic in nature, and the University and Colleges have a duty to accept only those who it believes have a strong chance of succeeding on our courses. Therefore, at the point of application, students are required to demonstrate a defined level of knowledge relevant to the course they wish to apply for. To help applicants to understand the required level of knowledge, we publish typical minimum requirements in certain qualifications.

Our Colleges regularly review entrance requirements and monitor the examination performance of our students once they arrive. Our entrance requirements are informed by internal research, which shows that there is a significant relationship between the number of high grade qualifications and Cambridge examination performance. We accept that this is out of line with other institutions, but as independent institutions we all set entrance requirements within our own context.

Best wishes
Tracy
